NATIONALS ANNOUNCE FOUR-YEAR EXTENSION TO WORKING AGREEMENT WITH POTOMAC OF SINGLE-A CAROLINA LEAGUE

The Washington Nationals today announced that they have signed a four-year extension to their Player Development Contract with the Potomac Nationals of the Single-A Carolina League. Nationals President Stan Kasten made the announcement.

“We are excited to extend our working relationship with the Potomac Nationals for four more years,” said Kasten. “The proximity of their facility to Washington has been a great asset to our organization as it pertains to players on rehabilitation assignments and for workouts. We have enjoyed a great relationship with the Potomac ownership and are looking forward to working together in the future.”

Potomac joined the Carolina League in 1978 and currently play in 6,000-seat Pfitzner Stadium, which is located 30 miles from Washington . Potomac began its affiliation with Washington in 2005.
