Each year, through free agency, extensions, or salary arbitration, player contracts are written up with management and player working to get the most out of the arrangement.

For management, it's often a case of offering up bonus perks that work to incentivize players (for example, Josh Willingham of the Nationals deal calls for performance bonuses of $25,000 each for 525, 550, 575 and 600 plate appearances).

Another bonus incentive in contracts involves the All-Star Game, which many times will have clauses that will offer up bonuses for being voted in as a starter or a lesser figure if selected to the team, but not as a starter.

Below is a break down of all the players that earned bonuses for the 2009 All-Star Game:

$125,000

Roy Halladay, Toronto.

$100,000

Carlos Beltran, N.Y. Mets; Torii Hunter, LA Angels; Francisco Rodriguez, N.Y. Mets; Johan Santana, N.Y. Mets.

$75,000
