

Harold Reynolds wins Round 1 against ESPN

Written by Maury Brown
Saturday, 05 May 2007 04:13

This week, a Connecticut Superior Court Judge ordered that ESPN must turn over all pertinent information regarding the case against

Harold Reynolds

, including Reynolds' personnel file. Reynolds was fired from ESPN in July of 2006 over what ESPN is claiming to be sexual harassment. Reynolds has filed a wrongful termination claim against ESPN.

Judge Joseph Shortall approved Reynolds' motions deciding that ESPN must turn in information and in a separate protective order document that certain key pieces of information must be treated confidential by order of the court, including "the names, addresses and any other identifying information of person(s) who complained to ESPN about plaintiff."

Judge Shortall's ruling on the information that ESPN must provide reads in part:

It is also ORDERED that the defendant shall provide the plaintiff with a copy of all papers, documents and reports in its possession, including electronic mail and facsimiles, which are within the definition of a "personal file" in Conn. General Statutes § 31-128 (7) until the termination of this litigation by judgment or settlement, including all appeals which may be taken from any judgment.

Both court documents are in PDF format and can be read here in our Business of Baseball (BOB) Documents library. The compliant by Reynolds can be viewed here

Harold Reynolds wins Round 1 against ESPN

Written by Maury Brown
Saturday, 05 May 2007 04:13
