

Harold Reynolds Hired by MLB.com as Broadcaster

Written by The Staff
Monday, 11 June 2007 12:31

Harold Reynolds, who was fired by ESPN for what was deemed by them to be sexual harassment of an intern (see court documents regarding the Reynolds case here in PDF format and can be read here in our Business of Baseball (BOB) Documents library. The complaint by Reynolds can be viewed here) has been hired today by MLB.com to be a broadcaster.

Terms of the deal have not yet been announced.

While it has not been mentioned, with the MLB Network slated to launch in 2009, Reynolds might be tapped in a role for the fledgling channel when it launches.