

Clubhouse Alcohol Policy

Written by Maury Brown
Monday, 14 May 2007 06:00

The following is the current state of the various alcohol policies in Major League Baseball across all 30 clubs. This resource is being added to The Biz of Baseball in the wake of the Josh Hancock accident in which he was found to have a blood alcohol level of 0.157, which is nearly twice Missouri's legal limit.

Since the accident, Major League Baseball clubs have been changing policy, although many had "no alcohol" policies in clubhouses prior. For those interested, CBS Evening News did a segment on baseball's connection to the beer industry, which can be viewed online here (Baseball and Booze). (UPDATED 5/14/07)

- Beer Only - Both Clubhouses

Arizona
Philadelphia
Atlanta San Francisco

Boston Seattle
◇ Cleveland
Texas
Detroit Toronto
LA Angels
▣ San Diego

LA Dodgers

◇ One case only in Clubhouse

▣ Players may bring their own wine

- Beer and Wine - Both Clubhouses

Tampa Bay

Clubhouse Alcohol Policy

Written by Maury Brown
Monday, 14 May 2007 06:00

- Beer Only ☐ - Home Clubhouse
- Beer and Liquor ☐ - Road Clubhouse

± Chicago (AL) Kansas City
Cincinnati Milwaukee

± One case only in home Clubhouse

- No Alcohol ☐ - Home Clubhouse
- Beer Only ☐ - Road Clubhouse

Baltimore
Houston
ψ Chicago (NL)
Pittsburgh
Colorado St. Louis
Florida NY Mets

ψ Visitors bring their own

- No Alcohol ☐ - Both Clubhouses

Minnesota ‡ Oakland
NY Yankees
Washington

‡ Visitors permitted to bring their own

Initial Source: The NY Times